Internal customers are the toughest customers...

Your tough-to-please internal customers need collaboration setups that work. That starts with good audio.

It's more important than you think

NetMeeting – webcasts – video-conferencing – distance learning. It has become quite common for staff from various offices to collaborate on projects over wide area networks.

Yet more often than not, the systems seem awkward, a strain to use.

The problem? It may surprise you, but studies show it's generally the audio. If co-workers can't hear each other clearly, collaboration is tough, no matter how good the picture or how clever the interface. Fatigue sets in, tempers flair, and there's a general feeling of discomfort and dissatisfaction.

You're probably aware of the issue, but you may not realize the solution is so easy.

Enter ClearOne

With more than 60,000 high-end, installed professional conferencing systems sold, ClearOne has earned a reputation as the industry leader. Why? They sound better than other conferencers, and far better than the audio built into most video and web conferencing systems.

First ClearOne conferencers use superior audio components with cutting-edge processing. Clarity starts at the high-grade microphones and ends at speakers that provide articulate, full range reproduction.

Next, they're full duplex, which eliminates the choppy cutting in and out common to speaker phones and cell phones.

Finally, they include such extras as Distributed Echo Cancellation,® noise cancellation, and ClearEffect™ processing to eliminate room, line, and microphone effects that would otherwise degrade the sound quality.

Comparing these conferencers to a phone or computer speaker is like comparing surround sound to a clock radio. It's that dramatic.

ClearOne MAX: Tabletop conferencing

The first fully expandable tabletop conference phones! Used as a single unit, MAX provides premium audio in small conference rooms. In larger rooms link up to four MAX conferencers for unrivaled microphone and loudspeaker coverage.

ClearOne MAX is the basic conferencing unit. MAXAttach is a 2, 3 or 4-unit kit.

Besides the configurable wired units, single MAX WIRELESS units are available when you don't want the clutter of cables strung across the room to the conference table.

ClearOne RAV: Premium conferencing

RAV is a complete, out-of-the-box audio conferencing system that includes an audio mixer, BOSE® loudspeakers, microphones and a wireless or wired control device. It is a higher-quality alternative to MAX that can be installed permanently in a conference room.

Use RAV as a stand-alone conferencer or connect it to other rich-media devices, such as video or webconferencing systems, for enhanced audio performance.

RAV 600 has 2 microphone pods, each with 360 degree coverage; RAV 900 has 3 pods. Either way, choose wall-mount or ceiling speakers. All RAV models include Ethernet control for remote management and configuration.
